STUDENT'S CORNER

My Stupid Brain

Making troubles,
And not remembering names,
This is my stupid brain.

Teacher,
I am really disciplined.
I can finish my homework in no time.
It's just tomorrow that my brain was too interested in the history of lime.
Maybe you are thinking,
I am making excuses,
But, just listening to my homework,
My brain refuses.

Causing problems,
Making me insane,
This is my stupid brain.

Exploring Life Beyond Home: The Adventure of Going Far Away

In the bustling world we inhabit, there comes a time when we are called upon to venture beyond the comfort of our homes. Whether it's for educational pursuits, career aspirations, or simply to explore the vastness of the world, leaving the familiar confines of home marks the beginning of a transformative journey.

Leaving home, is a significant milestone in one's life. It symbolizes newfound independence, personal growth, and the courage to step into the unknown. For many, this journey starts with education. Boarding schools, colleges in distant cities, or even studying abroad open doors to diverse experiences and opportunities.

The decision to leave home is never easy. It's accompanied by a whirlwind of emotions – excitement, anticipation, but also apprehension and nostalgia. The thought of being away from family and friends can be daunting, yet it's precisely this distance that fosters resilience and self-reliance.

Living away from home teaches us invaluable life lessons. From managing finances and navigating public transport to grocery shopping and cooking our meals, every task becomes a lesson in self-sufficiency. We learn to adapt, to solve problems independently, and to thrive in diverse environments.

Moreover, being away from home exposes us to different cultures, languages, and perspectives. Interacting with people from varied backgrounds broadens our understanding of the world and nurtures tolerance and empathy. It's through these interactions that we realize the richness of human diversity and the interconnectedness of our global community.

Yet, amidst the excitement of exploration, there's an undeniable longing for home – for the familiar sights, sounds, and smells that evoke a sense of belonging. Holidays and vacations become cherished opportunities to reunite with loved ones and to rekindle the bonds that transcend distance.

Nostalgia……

A Journey from Student to Teacher in the Halls of Memories

As I stroll down the familiar corridors of our school, memories flood my mind like an unstoppable tide. The echoes of laughter, the scent of textbooks, and the timeless charm of the building are all intertwined with my school days.

APS Jodhpur not only shaped my formative years but also served as the backdrop of my professional journey. The transition from a student to a teacher within these walls bears witness to the cyclical nature of life, a journey filled with nostalgia and profound reflection. The once wide-eyed student, absorbing knowledge like a sponge, now imparts wisdom with the same passion that once prompted his search for knowledge.

Classrooms, once witness to my struggles with algebra and poetry analysis, now bear witness a new generation taking on the challenges of academia. The desks that once nurtured my dreams now provide a platform for young minds to dream their dreams. It's a surreal experience, like walking through the pages of my history, the classrooms becoming chapters in the book of my life.

Teachers who once seemed like authoritative figures have become colleagues and mentors. Sharing the same staff room, engaging in professional discourse, and collectively contributing for the holistic excellence, the dynamics have evolved but the spirit remains rooted in the values. As a teacher, I strive to not only pass on information but to ignite the same flame of curiosity that once burned within me.

Nostalgia isn't merely a wistful glance at the past; it's a bridge connecting two pivotal chapters.
